THREATS:

- Threats – whether real or intended as a prank – require the mobilization of significant resources, potentially endanger lives and often carry life-altering consequences for the offender.
- Even a prank threat against a school or public place is considered a federal crime.
- Offenders will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. It can lead to a felony that carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison.
- Remind your children to think before they act. Making threats, whether real or hoax, has long-term consequences that could impact YOUR CHILD'S FUTURE!
